The Framework for Your School District's Local Control and Accountability Plan

Welcome to a New Era of Parent and Family Engagement in California

California's new Local Control Funding Formula law (LCFF) offers an historic opportunity to usher in a new era of parent and family engagement in our schools. This is an exciting time – a moment we must seize to help all children succeed.

Well-informed parents make a vital difference. With new academic standards, tests and the new funding and local accountability systems, it's crucial that parents engage, not only to support their own children's education, but to help guide decision-making at their schools.

Informing and educating all parents about LCFF is a top priority for California State PTA and the National PTA. As a grassroots association with more than a century of experience in connecting families and schools and helping parents develop leadership, communications and advocacy skills, we are ready to work with and support schools and school boards through a range of information, resources and training, including this comprehensive PTA National Standards for Family-School Partnerships Assessment Guide.

A recent poll conducted by EdSource showed 57 percent of parents with children in public schools are not yet aware of the new LCFF. This is not surprising, since it takes time for statewide initiatives to resonate locally – but it's also a call to action. Simply adding a requirement in law for more parent engagement is not enough. Engagement takes hard work, and it starts with getting the word out to make all parents aware of the new opportunity and importance of the LCFF.

Use PTA's research-based standards and indicators as the framework to guide your local school district's goals and activities for parent and family engagement, as required by the new Local Control and Accountability Plans (LCAPs).

We are pleased to provide the PTA National Standards for Family-School Partnerships Assessment Guide, which describes indicators for each of the six accepted standards for family-school partnerships.

The PTA Guide is based on extensive research over the past 20 years. It was developed with the guidance and support of prominent education leaders and practitioners in the field of family involvement across the country. The work of Dr. Joyce L. Epstein of the Center on School, Family, and Community Partnerships at Johns Hopkins University, in identifying six types of parent involvement, serves as the foundation of the PTA Standards and Assessment Guide.

The guide is also informed by the research of other experts on family-school partnerships including Dr. Anne T. Henderson, Senior Consultant, Community Organizing and Engagement, Annenberg Institute for School Reform and Dr. Karen L. Mapp, Lecturer, Harvard Graduate School of Education.

In an era marked by federal and state standards and assessment in education, PTA first responded to the challenge of ensuring student achievement in 1997 by issuing its own national standards for parent and family involvement – a proven factor in student success. The standards were updated in 2009 to reflect new research on what the standards for family engagement are, as well as research demonstrating what it “looks like” when schools and districts are meeting these standards, especially at a time when more is expected from parents and families if we want all children to achieve at even higher levels.

Some key things to keep in mind as you set goals and measurements for parent and family engagement in your school district:

PARENT AND FAMILY ENGAGEMENT IS LOCAL

A vital premise of the new LCFF is that decisions affecting student success are best made by those closest to the classroom. The PTA National Standards for Family-School Partnerships Assessment Guide provides an excellent, research-based framework to guide every school district's Local Control and Accountability Plan. We recommend that every plan seek to address each of the standards and that the various indicators help all stakeholders in the district to better understand the standards.

What is the best way to measure progress toward the standards? In the spirit of local control, we encourage that question to be part of every district's conversations around the LCAP. As part of local plans, each district, with parent input, should determine how it will build stronger family-school partnerships and measure progress toward each of the standards and indicators based on the priorities and needs of its community.

PARENT ENGAGEMENT STRATEGIES SHOULD BE EMBEDDED THROUGHOUT THE LCAP

While parent engagement is specifically identified as one of the eight state priority areas that all LCAPs must address, it is important to recognize that parent engagement is also a strategy that will enable school districts to achieve their goals in each of the other priority areas. As such, districts should be sure to embed parent engagement components throughout their entire LCAP plans.

PARENT AND FAMILY ENGAGEMENT IS AN INVESTMENT

There are no shortcuts to raising student achievement or to building successful parent engagement. Each takes an investment of time and resources and ongoing commitment by school districts, educators, parents and community partners working together.

Authentic engagement is much more than a one-time check-box on a form. It's about building a culture at every school where parents and family members feel welcomed, respected and appreciated – a culture where information is freely shared, and input is sought and genuinely considered.

Many school districts are already doing excellent work to engage parents, but there is much more to do across the state, especially to reach parents from all school sites, backgrounds and in all languages.

PARENT AND FAMILY ENGAGEMENT FOR STUDENT SUCCESS STARTS AT HOME

Engaged parents make a difference in ensuring that their children enjoy overall success in school. When families, schools and communities work as partners, student achievement is boosted and children are better prepared to lead healthy, happy and productive lives. More than 30 years of research indicates as much. It tells us that students with involved parents are more likely to attend school regularly, perform better in school, earn higher grades, pass their classes, develop better social skills and go on to post-secondary education.

This successful strategy is based on a shared understanding in the school community that parents are a child's first teachers and key resources in their child's education and growth. As important stakeholders, engaged parents are involved in all aspects of their child's education. Whether it's reading together, monitoring homework at the kitchen table, talking to teachers about their child's progress or taking an active part in school governance and decision-making, parents make a difference.

BUILDING BRIDGES AND BREAKING DOWN BARRIERS IS ESSENTIAL

When developing engagement plans, school districts must focus on what the parents in their communities need – it’s imperative that schools meet parents “where they are.” That means offering multiple meeting locations and times to accommodate schedules and transportation capabilities. It means providing translation and interpretation to break down language barriers.

It also means recognizing that parents come to the table with different levels of knowledge about educational issues, different comfort levels about participating in meetings, and different past experiences interacting with schools.

As we’ve seen through the PTA School Smarts parent engagement program, parents from all backgrounds often desire more foundational training about the school system. They want to know more about how their children learn, and the different ways to get involved, before they feel comfortable and confident to attend or speak up at a school board meeting, especially on a specific budget matter.

TEACHERS AND PRINCIPALS ARE VITAL LINKS

Teachers are parents’ most important links to their schools. Any communications plan to reach parents which fails to include a role for teachers is an incomplete plan. Similarly, we know that the best outreach and engagement occurs at school sites where the principal has established it as a priority. Authentic engagement is a collaborative effort between parents and educators – when we all work together, students succeed.

WHEN COMMUNICATING: MAKE IT REAL AND MAKE IT RELEVANT

State policymakers are infamous for making education policy sound complicated. Jargon and acronyms abound: LCAP, Common Core, Smarter Balance, NCLB – the list goes on – and it can quickly cause parents to rub their temples. One of the best ways to engage parents is to ditch the jargon and communicate in a straightforward way. Educators should explain clearly to parents how a particular program or service affects their child in his or her classroom.

LCFF-LCAP – An Opportunity for a New Spirit of Collaboration

All parents want the best for their children. They want to be able to know what is going on at their children’s schools, and they want to provide informed input. Parents want to know their input is seriously considered and helps make a positive difference.

Similarly, teachers and school administrators go into the education field because they want to positively impact lives. They want to help students succeed.

The greatest promise of the new era of family engagement in our schools is that parents, educators and elected school board members will talk more often and work together even more. The results, when we do, will be amazing for children.

Introduction: Measuring Success

PTA's National Standards for Family-School Partnerships offer a framework for how families, schools, and communities should work together to support student success. To facilitate the implementation in local schools of programs, practices, and policies that are guided by the Standards, PTA has developed an assessment guide, otherwise known as a rubric.

The National Standards Assessment Guide provides specific goals for each Standard, as well as indicators for measuring whether those goals are being met. There are also examples for each indicator to show what good practice looks like at different levels of development:

- ❖ Level 1: Emerging—Limited level of development and implementation
- ❖ Level 2: Progressing—Functioning level of development and implementation
- ❖ Level 3: Excelling—Highly functioning level of development and implementation

Each level of practice should build on the last; good practices at the emerging and progressing levels are expected to continue at the next level.

Who Should Be Using the Assessment Guide

Anyone who has a stake in improving schools and making sure children succeed should find this assessment guide to be a useful tool: PTA leaders, other parent leaders, school administrators, school board members, policy makers at all levels, teacher-training institutions, education advocates, community organizations, and more.

This guide focuses on implementation at the local school level, because, ultimately, change must happen within each school building and each school community. That's where the learning happens. Nevertheless, many of the actions recommended will require district policies, resources, professional development, and support if they are to be achieved and sustained.

Share this assessment guide with your school action team, principal, school board members, community partners, and others as you build family-school partnerships for student success.

10 Ways to Use the Assessment Guide

The National Standards Assessment Guide can be used in a number of ways to help develop and improve programs, practices, and policies that affect family and community engagement in schools.

Here are 10 ideas on how to use the guide:

- ❖ To assess current family involvement practices at the school
- ❖ To develop ideas for involvement practices and activities
- ❖ To inform the development of a school improvement plan and the LCAP.
- ❖ To monitor progress in reaching school improvement goals, and the goals and outcomes of the LCAP.
- ❖ To design professional development for staff
- ❖ To discuss the Standards at PTA and faculty meetings
- ❖ To conduct a school walk-through looking for evidence of implementation for each Standard
- ❖ To create a survey for parents and staff
- ❖ To guide the development of school-based parent involvement policies and compacts
- ❖ To design research and evaluation studies and instruments

PTA National Standards for Family-School Partnerships At-a-Glance

STANDARD 1 – Welcoming All Families into the School Community

Families are active participants in the life of the school and feel welcomed, valued and connected to each other, to school staff and to what students are learning and doing in class.

STANDARD 2 – Communicating Effectively

Families and school staff engage in regular, two-way, meaningful communication and learning.

STANDARD 3 – Supporting Student Success

Families and school staff continuously collaborate to support students' learning and healthy development, both at home and at school, and have regular opportunities to strengthen their knowledge and skills to do so effectively.

STANDARD 4 – Speaking Up for Every Child

Families are empowered to be advocates for their own and other children to ensure that students are treated fairly and have access to learning opportunities that will support their success.

STANDARD 5 – Sharing Power

Families and school staff are equal partners in decisions that affect children and families and together inform, influence, and create policies, practices and programs.

STANDARD 6 – Collaborating With the Community

Families and school staff collaborate with community members to connect students, families and staff to expanded learning opportunities, community services and civic participation.
